Citizen Complaint Information

You have the right to make a complaint against a peace officer for any improper conduct, and to have this complaint investigated pursuant to procedures required by California Law.

This agency conducts a complete internal investigation on all citizen complaints and retains the reports of these investigations for a minimum of five (5) years.

After investigation a complaint, this agency may find that there is substantial evidence to sustain your complaint, at which time appropriate action will be taken. Likewise, the investigation may reveal that there is not enough evidence to warrant any action. Regardless of the possible outcome, if you believe that an officer from this agency behaved in a manner, which was improper, you have the right, and are encouraged to make the complaint and have it thoroughly investigated.

I have read and understand the above information.
