DID YOU KNOW?

- 41 million children between the ages of 5 and 14 go trick-or-treating each year. That's a lot of costumes and packaging. Help cut down on spooky holiday waste by hitting the thrift stores this year. You'll save big bucks on barely used costumes and decrease landfill waste. Now that's a trick for all ages!

- California produces 100 million pounds of pumpkins each year. Help reduce food waste by using all of your pumpkin's tasty bits! Instead of throwing away your arty orange endeavor, save landfill space by roasting the seeds for a healthy snack and composting your droopy jack-o-lantern to feed your garden.

- The average American ate 24.7 pounds of candy in 2010. Talk about a sugar rush! This Halloween, make an effort to cut down on food wrapper waste by nixing the candy and handing out items that will be of use in a child's life, like pencils made of recycled material. If you simply can't stray away from dishing out sweets, select candy that uses less packaging.
